Talking-head reels

One take at a table, one prop, captions on screen

01 Rating Diwali sweets for fat loss

She scores five common mithai out of 10 for someone trying to lose fat, from kaju katli to gulab jamun, and says how much of each fits in a normal day. Diwali is on 8 November and wedding season follows, so this is the most timely idea here. A sweets ranking from @fitwithpratham reached 90K last Diwali.

VISUAL HOOK
She opens a mithai box toward the camera, then slaps a handwritten “2/10” card on the first sweet.

VERBAL HOOK
“I rated your favourite Diwali sweets for fat loss, and one of them gets a two.”

02 Which namkeen is the least bad?

A follow-up to her Coke reel. Five packets of popular namkeen and biscuits sit on the table, and she ranks them by calories and protein per serving, reading the back of each pack.

VISUAL HOOK
The same lineup shot as the Coke reel, then she sweeps the worst packet off the table.

VERBAL HOOK
“Not all namkeen is the same. If you’re losing fat, the one you pick matters.”

03 Your watch is lying about calories

She explains why the calorie number on a smartwatch is a rough estimate and why eating it back slows fat loss. The original version of this idea by @trainbloom reached 19M views.

VISUAL HOOK
She takes off her smartwatch, holds the calorie screen up to the lens, then drops it face down on the table.

VERBAL HOOK
“Your watch says 600 calories burned. I wouldn’t eat a single one of them back.”

04 The one food I'd never eat as a coach

A covered steel dabba sits on the table the whole time. She lists what viewers are probably guessing (rice, sugar, ghee, maida) and explains why none of them is the problem on its own. She lifts the lid only in the last second. @chandnisinhaa's version of this format reached 719K.

VISUAL HOOK

She slides a closed steel dabba toward the camera and taps the lid.

VERBAL HOOK

"There's one food I'd never eat as a fat loss coach. Guess what's inside."

05 Gained weight after shaadi?

She walks through what actually changes after marriage: late family dinners, eating leftovers, functions every weekend, and workouts that move to "from Monday". The point is that habits changed, so habits can change back. The same topic reached 633K for @chandnisinhaa.

VISUAL HOOK

She holds a wedding card up to the camera, then flips it to show a weighing scale reading behind it.

VERBAL HOOK

"Everyone says weight gain after shaadi is normal. It's not your metabolism."

06 Dadi's thali vs the clean-eating plate

She compares a regular Indian thali (dal, roti, sabzi, curd) with a trendy "clean" plate from social media, and shows the thali often holds up better for protein and fibre. It defends food her audience already eats, which is why @sowtrue.in_'s version did 22 times that creator's usual views.

VISUAL HOOK

Two plates side by side; she pushes the avocado-toast plate out of frame and pulls the thali in.

VERBAL HOOK

"Influencers say Indian food makes you fat. Let's look at what's actually on this plate."

Non-talking-head reels

7 to 15 seconds of footage, bold text, details in the caption

07 Nine weeks left in 2026

A countdown reel for the end of the year. The text says there's still time to lose fat before January, and the caption holds a simple 8-week plan plus her comment keyword for the free PDF.

VISUAL HOOK

A phone calendar flipping quickly from October to December.

TEXT HOOK

"There are nine weeks left in 2026. That's enough."

08 To every woman who...

A motivation reel with one line of text per clip, aimed at her audience's real situations. A reel built this way by @tayunfiltered got 7.9% engagement.

VISUAL HOOK

Slow clips of ordinary moments, such as tying shoelaces at dawn or a cup of chai on the balcony.

TEXT HOOK

"To every woman who served everyone first and ate whatever was left."

09 POV: the aunty at the wedding

A silent skit to a trending audio. Text sets up the scene, and her face does the rest. It suits wedding season and needs no script.

VISUAL HOOK

She freezes mid-bite of a sweet, then gives a slow look to the camera.

TEXT HOOK

"POV: Aunty asks 'kitna weight badh gaya?' at the sangeet."

10 Fat loss rules every Indian woman has heard

A myth-busting reel with no talking. Each common rule appears on a sticky note or on screen, gets stamped MYTH, and the caption gives the real answer to each in one or two lines. Myth-busting was the strongest format across her research library, and this version needs no speaking at all.

VISUAL HOOK

She peels a sticky note that says "No rice at night" off the fridge and crumples it.

TEXT HOOK

"Rules every Indian woman hears about fat loss. Most of them are myths."

11 The free 12-week plan

A screen recording of her own 12-week fat loss PDF, scrolling slowly through the pages. It sells her lead magnet directly, using the comment-keyword setup that drove her most-commented reel.

VISUAL HOOK

Her thumb scrolling fast through the plan on a phone held to the camera.

TEXT HOOK

"I put my whole 12-week fat loss plan in one PDF. Comment GUIDE and it's yours."
